About Laura Berman Fortgang

Laura's professional life is anchored by her international reputation as a pioneer in the personal coaching field. Only one expression of her twenty plus years of supporting people and organizations to find success, purpose and satisfaction, Laura is also a best-selling author, sought-after speaker, corporate spokesperson and interfaith minister. In other words, she is a master communicator of her message and yours.

Laura's years as a professional musical theatre performer formed her no-nonsense, entertaining, and fun speaking style that has helped her uplifting messages spread far and wide. Her five books are now published in 12 languages. They include: The Prosperity Plan, Now What? 90 Days to a New Life Direction, Living Your Best Life, Take Yourself to the Top and The Little Book On Meaning which was a finalist for a Books for a Better Life award alongside the Dalai Lama.

Laura has also been a media perennial for years. Her appearances on Oprah, The CBS Early Show, NBC's Today, Good Morning America, and various other nationally syndicated outlets as well as a long stint as contributing editor for Redbook Magazine, to name a few, have helped her reach millions of people who want to improve their work and life.

Through her coaching company, InterCoach, Inc./Now What?® Coaching, Laura has provided coaching to diverse clients ranging from homemakers, celebrities and Fortune 500 companies to NASA and the Army Corps of Engineers.
